Storyopolis reading touts eco-friendly living

Lisa Beres, author of the children's book My Body My House, knows how to make a story come to life.

At a recent reading of the book at Storyopolis in Studio City, Beres used her own body to illustrate the house. She sat, flanking guest narrator and actress Kelly Rutherford, playing the role of the house with a mini, house-shaped hat on her head.

The book, whose primary color illustrations were done by Julia Wolf, depicts the importance of a healthy, environmentally-friendly home. Beres and her husband, Ron, who read the part of the house dressed as a kind of eco-Bob the Builder, entertained a mostly under-five crowd in the store's gallery.
